Israeli Apology For Killing Of Bernadotte Concedes Most Of Swedish Findings

Israel apologized to the Swedish Government for the assassination of Count Bernadotte, United Nations Mediator for Palestine, by terrorists on September 17, 1948. A memorandum explaining the incident was presented to Foreign Minister Osten Unden in Stockholm by Dr. Walter Eytan, director general of the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs, who made a special trip for this purpose.

The memorandum resulted from a note presented at Tel Aviv last March by the Swedish Government asking for a full explanation. The Israeli Government appointed a special committee composed of a Supreme Court justice, the Attorney General and Dr. Eytan to investigate the Swedish allegations.

Israeli concedes most of the findings of the Swedish Chief Prosecutor, who conducted his own investigation, says the New York Times. There was failure to take immediate steps for the apprehension of the criminals; failure to cordon the scene of the crime; delay in carrying out an examination of the scene of the crime; failure to examine the leading car of the convoy and Count Bernadotte's own vehicle, and failure to collect evidence from four members of the Mediator's party.

All these admitted shortcomings were attributable "to the absence of any clear understanding and a conflict of competence between the civil police on one hand and the Army, which was carrying out parallel activities, on the other." Two sets of inquiries were carried out without effective coordination.

Although it was suspected but never proved that the Stern Group was responsible for the murder, Israel's official report mentions this organization in its summation. It declared that the inability of any of the investigating committees to hold proper identification line-ups "was due to most unsatisfactory, indeed chaotic, conditions existing in military prisons in which the Stern Group detainees were held."

The report also declares that the state was new at the time, being only four months old, and says that its mistakes were obvious ones that result from inexperience.

"For reasons of internal security, the Government was not able to make a full report on the results of the army's activities, which have proceeded uninterruptedly since the date of the murder and are still in progress," the report says.

"It is, however, well known that it is not the main function of the army to assemble evidence of a kind which would sustain a conviction in a court of law, and its inquiries were not conducted with this primarily in view. Nevertheless, material in possession of the army has been re-examined to see if it is of a character suitable to form the basis of a criminal prosecution or further inquiries by the civil police."

The report says that while the material casts suspicion on certain persons, there is not sufficient evidence to bring about an indictment.

The Government rejected the suggestion by the Swedish Prose-

Visits Israel, Raised Millions For It

When Eddie Cantor arrived at Tel Aviv to take his first look at Israel, his famous eyes were as big as silver dollars when he saw the welcoming committee that included United States Ambassador James G. McDonald, Government officials and representatives of the United Jewish Appeal.

With him were his wife, Ida; Mac Kriendler, New York restaurateur, and Mr. and Mrs. Yoland Markson of Los Angeles and Boston. The Marksons, like Cantor, have been instrumental in raising millions for the U. J. A.

"As a good American and a good Jew, I believe that we in the United States should see to it that the youngest of all democracies, the only one that has emerged from the ashes of World War II, should survive," he said. "If we can pour millions of dollars into the Marshall Plan in order to convince people that democracy is the only worthwhile form of government how can we refrain from helping this democratic state, Israel?"

Cantor, who has raised $10,000,000 for the U. J. A. in the United States, came to Israel to see at first hand what he has been talking about. He is extremely interested in the immigration problem and will investigate this issue by visiting camps and talking to inhabitants.

Wants Jews In U. S. Census By Religion

Albert M. Greenfield, president of the Jewish Statistical Bureau, urged the bureau's board of directors at the annual luncheon meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria, to fight for the continued designation of Jews as a religious group rather than as a race. Mr. Greenfield, chairman of the board of several banking, merchandising and realty concerns, charged that "powerful quarters have tried to impose the racial status on Jews in the national census with attendant information on occupation and financial position."

Mr. Greenfield did not identify the "powerful quarters," but he said data gathered on Jews through such a census would be misused by "hostile" quarters in an exaggeration of the economic position of the Jews.

Mr. Greenfield stressed the desire of the Jewish Statistical Bureau, which has been gathering information on Jewish religious life since 1914, to have Jews counted as a religious body in the religious census made by the government in the seventh year of every decade. This census is made by polling religious organizations on their membership. The J. S. B. does the counting for American Jewry. The government does not make an individual count as it does for the population census.

Mr. Greenfield said that in 1947 the government called a conference of Jewish organizations in Washington to discuss the place of Jews in the census. Demands were made at that conference, and were opposed by the Jewish delegations, to record congregational Jews separately from non-affiliated Jews, Mr. Greenfield said.

"Such a procedure," he noted, "contrary to the teachings of our religion and the practice of our communities — would have caused great harm, and ultimately it would have led to the enumeration of American Jews in a different manner from that of the Protestants and Catholics."

Mr. Greenfield noted that the Jew's "status in the census has been attacked from two sides. On the one hand the cry has come that American Jews should be enumerated differently from other religious groups; and statistics of the Jewish people would give how many Jews are in this country or in that; how many Jews are employers, employees, skilled, unskilled, etc., etc. From another side, it has been suggested that the government draw a line of demarcation between those Jews who are directly affiliated with congregations and those who are not."

Sylvan Gotschal, chairman of the statistical bureau's board of directors, who presided at the meeting, asked for $100,000 to continue the work of the bureau under Dr. H. S. Linfield, the executive secretary. The bureau is publishing "The Jewish Directory" which lists all the Jewish religious leaders and congregations in the United States, as well as Jewish population data.

Was One Of America's Great Benefactors

Samuel S. Fels, Philadelphia industrialist and philanthropist, died in Temple University Hospital after a brief illness. His age was ninety. Since 1914, Mr. Fels had been president of the Fels Naptha Soap Company, founded in Philadelphia by his father, Lazarus, an immigrant from Bavaria. During his lifetime he reputedly donated more than $40,000,000 to the cause of humanity.

Long active in civic affairs, he was recognized as one of Philadelphia's foremost benefactors. Among his many gifts to the city was the $200,000 Fels Planetarium at the Franklin Institute on the Benjamin Franklin Parkway.

Mr. Fels founded the Crime Prevention Association of Philadelphia and helped organize the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, which honored him at its golden anniversary in 1934. He received the $10,000 Bok Award as the city's outstanding citizen of 1948, and an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of Pennsylvania in 1937.

His principal philanthropy was the Samuel S. Fels Fund, which he established in 1935 to aid research projects, especially in the fields of medicine and government. Among the activities sponsored by the fund are the Institute of Local and State Government at the University of Pennsylvania, the research institute at the Medical School of Temple University, and a basic study on nutrition at the University of North Carolina.

Other projects sponsored by the fund include a research institute for the study of human development in a new laboratory near the campus of Antioch College, and research projects in photosynthesis and the protein molecule at the University of Chicago.

Mr. Fels avoided recognition as a "man of good deeds," but he sought to stimulate public interest and support of research in the fields of government and medicine. "I regard research as almost a spiritual thing," he said when interviewed on his ninetieth birthday last February.

Interfaith Event Barred By Ruling

An interfaith baccalaureate service for the Pleasantville, N. Y., High School graduating class, scheduled to be held in the school auditorium June 25, was cancelled because of the withdrawal of the Rev. James C. Gunning, pastor of Holy Innocents Roman Catholic Church, who was to have addressed the class.

Harold Davey, Superintendent of Schools, said that Father Gunning notified him of his withdrawal citing a ruling by Lewis A. Wilson, Acting State Commissioner of Education. On June 5, Mr. Wilson held, in a similar case at Somers, N. Y., that a baccalaureate service as a "religious service" could not be held in a public school, and should be cancelled if there was local objection to it.

The Somers case was resolved when school officials changed the baccalaureate service to a patriotic event, with representatives of all religious groups agreeing to participate on that basis.

The service planned at Pleasantville was to have included Bible readings, singing of hymns, invocation and benediction. Father Gunning contended, that, in view of Mr. Wilson's ruling, he could not participate. Later, four Protestant ministers and a rabbi announced that a baccalaureate service would be held on June 27 in St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church.

They are Rabbi Solomon Kahn Kaplan, of Temple Beth-El, Mount Kisco, N. Y.; the Rev. Edward I. Campbell, of the Presbyterian Church; the Rev. George Chant, of the Methodist Church; the Rev. Brandford W. Ketchum, of St. John's Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Kenneth J. Dale, of Emmanuel Lutheran Church, all of Pleasantville.

Father Gunning explained that, under canon law, Catholic students may not take part in a non-Catholic religious ceremony. Forty of the high school's ninety-seven graduating students are Roman Catholics, Mr. Davey estimated.

Jews Of Europe Need Trained Leaders, Economic And Legal Aid To Restore Group Life

Jews in Western Europe have a "real need" for a Jewish Point Four program, for technical and specialized assistance with which to rebuild and maintain their community life, according to the American Jewish Committee. In a comprehensive report on the situation of Jews in Europe, North Africa and the Moslem lands prepared by its Paris office, the Committee notes that many of the 500,000 Jews who have chosen to stay on the Continent do not yet feel adjusted.

With financial help from the United States and other aid from international sources shrinking, the report found, the problem of adjustment in the face of decreasing emigration is made more acute by legal, language, economic and racial barriers that vary in size from country to country.

Jewish leadership was largely annihilated in the last two decades, the Committee reported, and qualified Jewish welfare workers, educators and rabbis must be trained for community service and a new lay leadership attracted and developed. In many areas new bases for fund-raising to support Jewish activities must be found, and elsewhere the social and community know-how is needed to fight anti-Semitism where is appears, according to the report.

The Committee reported that in Belgium the problem was fundamentally a legal one; how to make the acquisition of citizenship for 90 per cent of the Jewish population of 40,000 quicker and easier. In France, barriers of language and custom stand in the way of complete adjustment of more than half the Jewish population, most of whom came from Central and Eastern Europe.

In Sweden, 6,000 refugee Jewish girls who came from German concentration camps and who like the country and its people cannot find Jewish husbands.

One problem common to many of the countries, according to the Committee, is economic adjustment. Since Jews are often newcomers in many countries, they find it difficult to get employment, and in some states they are being cut off from job possibilities because of their lack of citizenship.

The Committee reported that while anti-Semitism was not particularly potent in Western Europe, with the exception of Germany and Austria, it was en-

MARRIAGES

LEVINE-LANDIS

The marriage of Ruth, younger daughter of Mrs. Samuel Landis, 5865 Jeanne Mance Street, and the late Samuel Landis, to Mac Levine, son of Mrs. David Levine, Lacombe Avenue, and the late David Levine, took place on Sunday, June 11, at half-past one o'clock, at Beth David Synagogue, Rabbi M. Feicher officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Edward Landis, of Ottawa, Ont. Her wedding gown was of white Chantilly lace and tulle, with a strapless tulle bodice, and lace jacket, made with a high, Victorian collar, and sleeves ending in points over her hands; the skirt being of tulle over taffeta. She had a tulle illusion veil, fingertip-length, held by a headdress of white lilacs; and she carried a cascade bouquet of mauve orchids bordered with white lilacs. Mrs. Ernest H. Kassie, of Ottawa, Ont., sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a floor-length dress of aquamarine-blue chiffon and lace, fashioned with a strapless bodice, and full skirt, with a matching blue lace jacket; and a matching lace picture hat. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of Talisman roses. Sidney Levine, brother of the groom, was best man; and the ushers were Norman Zucker, cousin of the bride; Sidney Levine, cousin of the groom; and Cecil Hornstein, Maury Salis, Moses R. Levine, Henry Lonn, Carl Segal, and Nathan Schwartz. Spring flowers were used to decorate the synagogue; and the reception hall, where a buffet luncheon was served. Receiving, Mrs. Landis, mother of the bride, wore a gown of crepe and lace, in crushed-raspberry shade, designed with a square neckline, and lace yoke reaching to a V at the back, and forming the long, pointed sleeves of her dress, of which the skirt was crepe. She had a navy-blue lace-straw hat, trimmed with green wheat, also a green orchid and navy-blue accessories. Mrs. Levine, mother of the groom, wore a gown of skipper-blue faille and lace, cut with a stand-up collar and full skirt. She had a white hat, and a corsage bouquet of gardenias. For the wedding trip to the United States, the bride travelled in a costume composed of a pale yellow corduroy jacket and black skirt, and a corsage of orchids. The couple will live on Maplewood Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Kassie, and Edward Landis, of Ottawa, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. O. Miller and daughter, Betty, of Quebec, uncle, aunt, and cousin of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. S. Itkin, of Farnham, cousins of the bride; Jack Cappel, of New York, cousin of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kantor, uncle and aunt of the groom; and Mr. and Mrs. A. Lieberman, cousins of the groom, all of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Mr. and Mrs. M. Kagan, and family, of Newark, N. J., cousins of the groom, were present at the wedding.

RUBINOVICH-GLASS

The marriage of Fern Thelma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Glass, 776 Stuart Avenue, to Jack Brahm Rubinovich, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon M. Rubinovich, Lajoie Avenue, took place on Sunday, June 11, at twelve o'clock, at the Prince of Wales Salon, of the Windsor Hotel. Rabbi Charles Bender, of Adath Israel Synagogue, officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white silk marquisette, fashioned with a shirred bodice, fastened up the front with tiny buttons, and made with a square neckline, and shirred sleeves, ending in points over the hands. The full hooped skirt was over taffeta. Her coronet lilies-of-the-valley held her hip-length veil of tulle illusion; and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of stephanotis. Miss Lorna Marilyn Phillips, Vendome Avenue, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing a floor-length dress of pale blue organza, with a roll collar, shaping into a criss-cross effect at the waist, and with short sleeves. She had a Dutch cap of white petticoat lace, and carried a nosegay of pastel-shaded roses, sweet peas and baby's breath. Jack Nissenson, Wilson Avenue, cousin of the groom, was best man. Leonard Edward Glass, nephew of the bride, was ring-bearer, in a grey flannel suit. Mrs. M. N. Fineberg played the wedding music. White peonies and larkspur, arranged with palms, were used to decorate. At the luncheon reception, with two hundred and twenty guests, in the Hotel's York Room, the bride's table, centred with the wedding cake, was arranged with white and salmon-pink sweet peas and baby's breath. Receiving, Mrs. Glass, mother of the bride, wore a gown of pale blue nylon net and lace. The roll collar and top were of lace, and the skirt was net, with a cascade of lace woven into the nylon, and set over taffeta. Her white lace picture hat was trimmed with blue net and velvet, and she had a spray of purple orchids pinned to her handbag. Mrs. Rubinovich, mother of the groom, wore a gown of blue silk chiffon. Made with a medium-high neckline, three-quarter sleeves, with turned back cuffs, it had a floor-length bouffant skirt. Her blue straw hat was trimmed with fuchsia-color, and she had a similar spray of flowers pinned to her handbag. The bride and groom left by motor for Miami Beach, Florida, the bride travelling in a dress of navy-blue organza, trimmed with white flowers; with a white hat and navy-blue accessories. They will live at 5360 Decelles Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Harold S. Glass and son, Leonard Edward, of Long Island, N. Y., brother, sister-in-law, and nephew of the bride: Mr. and Mrs. P. Nissenson, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Miss Anne Billingkoff, of Winnipeg, Man.; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Raff, and Mrs. Bernard Albert, of Paterson, N. J., were wedding guests.

DECRIES VIOLATION OF JEWISH LAWS

Rabbi Theodore L. Adams, of Jersey City, N. J., opening the Rabbinical Council of America Convention which brought together Rabbis from 40 States and Canada, at Chicago, Ill., called upon American Jews to adopt traditional Judaism as the only religious way of life. In a presidential report, Rabbi Dr. Israel Tabak, of Baltimore, criticized Jewish institutions, hospitals and charitable agencies which violate and flaunt Jewish tradition and law while purporting to serve the Jewish community.

"If Jewish life on this continent is not to be reduced to insignificance within a few generations," he said, "we shall have to find ways of ending such Jewish lawlessness, at least in public life. What excuse is there for national Jewish bodies supported by public funds to violate the laws of Sabbath observance? How long will Jewish organizations continue the sham of holding convention sessions on the Sabbath, and under the guise of Oneg Shabbat commit the crudest violations of the Sabbath? Why should Jewish agencies, maintained by the Jewish community keep their offices open on the Sabbath, even if it be done on a limited or unofficial basis?"

Rabbi Tabak also decried the gross violation of dietary laws in institutions such as Jewish hospitals where kosher food is at best "tolerated in a little corner", with no trace of dietary laws in the main kitchen. Why should dietary laws, which are as basic to Judaism as the Ten Commandments, be wantonly disregarded at public functions and fund-raising dinners? The time has come for American Jews to end religious lawlessness in Jewish life."

Former US Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin 3d, a member of the American Christian Palestine Committee, proposed the appointment of an impartial commission, composed of Christians and Jews, to resolve the minority problem of the Yemenite Jews in Israel. Both Zacharia Gluska, Yemenite member of the Knesset (Parliament) of Israel and the American Committee for Relief of Yemenite Jews recently charged the Jewish Agency for Palestine with discrimination against Yemenite Jews in Israel, maintaining that they have not received social, religious and economic support.

Burial was in Nusach Haori cemetery. Shiva was at the home of a son, Jacob Boloten, 4621 Hutchison Street.

Samuel Butterman, widower of the late Mrs. Sarah Pearl Butterman, of Brooklyn, N.Y., aged eighty-one, died on June 14. He is survived by two daughters, Mary Butterman, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Mrs. S. Nayer (Anne), of Montreal; three sons, Leo, and Isaac, both of Brooklyn; and Morris Butterman, 4941 Grosvenor Avenue, Montreal; seven grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. Funeral service and burial took place in Brooklyn.

Jews At Home Have Many Things To Learn

BY JACK WINOCOUR, IN THE NEW STATESMAN AND NATION

The hills above Jerusalem are silent except for the number of bees in the clover where last year the battery of mortars stood. The fluid front has frozen into the immobility of armistice, and from my window I can watch the play of light on the grey Old City walls, where Arab legionnaires drowse in the sunshine. Children pick wild flowers for Sabbath nosegays in Mamilla graveyard, and youth makes summer love in the velvet night by the Monastery of the Cross. In Rehavia drawing-rooms ice tinkles in tall glasses. Tomorrow there may be khamsin; but no war.

The heroic days are over. They were brave days of war and wonder. We tasted them briefly, and they have left behind a nostalgia for danger and lost comradeship, which are remembered longer than thirst or hunger or weary days of siege. The revolutionary brigades — for this was a revolution as well as a war—are no more and the remnant of those who died at Zion Gate, before Latrun, and in the wastelands of the Negev, has been fused into anonymity in the defence army of Israel.

That was yesterday. To-day the diplomats drink tea on the lawns of Ha'Kirya, the Government quarter outside Tel Aviv. Many people are very important. And the tourists gape and focus their miniature cameras on the debris of battlefields, and complain about the price of Martinis and their composition. "Three parts gin and one of vermouth," they moan to the apathetic bartender, who was once a lawyer.

Is it, after all, like everywhere else? Some people have cars and some walk. Some people have houses and others live in tents. Some have money, and others jingle the last few piastres in their pockets.

They willed it; and it came to pass. To have something or to have nothing; but always to be themselves. This reality of nationhood still has a dreamlike quality. Sometimes I catch my breath in wonder. Even if it dissolved now, it would leave behind a sense of miracle achieved. In the moments of frustration and anger — and there are not a few — we all treasure the miracle in our hearts. That is the achievement; being like everybody else everywhere.

We or they? The newcomer like myself who has come here to live finds himself torn between past and present. "They" gradually becomes "We." That is one of the marvels of this place. The act of identification is an exorcism of long centuries of escaping from ourselves. For a Westerner it requires an effort of will that makes continual demands on nerve and mind.

I force myself to take the hand of the wretched Jews from Aden. Down the dark corridor of centuries past we went our different ways. I emerged in Glasgow and they at the Southern gateway of Arabia. Now we have come together again in the valley of dry bones. Suddenly there is a great rustling: the skeletons are beflesh-ed; and we stand up as men.

There are terrible moments of awe, of revulsion and naked fear. One such came to me in a room in the Mea Shearim ghetto of Jerusalem, where Hassidim, a fossilized schism of mystics who wear the garb of eighteenth-century Poland, ate bread and herring, drank wine and brandy, as they listened to their Rabbi expound a Talmudic homily, and then broke into chants and dances of such unutterable poignancy that some atavism gripped me, and I found myself intoning and swaying to their sad rhythm, as they circled in slow dance. They are not of Israel, and they still await Messiah, refusing to accede to Jewish temporal power. Yet the strength of their conviction swirling down secular channels made this State.

Are we ceasing to be Westerners? I do not know, but it is clear we shall never be the same again as we were in Diaspora, and that we in Israel are treading a different road from those who remain without the gates. If we have adorned ourselves with the trappings of statehood, the flags and parades and ceremonies, the uniforms and badges, it is not for themselves alone. These rituals give us dignity. They are not the end.

We had to take this long step backward in a world where international man has ceased to exist, or is denounced as cosmopolitan. We have been looking backwards for centuries. Now we must look forward, not for the space of a year, but for the generation which will determine the character of a new nation made out of an old people.

A year ago Israel's fate as a nation was poised delicately in the balance of arms. To-day's decision depends on a far wider and more complex range of forces. Battle may be one of them, but at this moment neither Israel nor her neighbours wish to renew the battle. There is so much to be done in the way of nation-building that a renewal of war would disturb or destroy; although no final military decision has been reached, Arab wounds still rankle, and uneasy armistice drags slowly towards insecure peace.

The problems are those of the post-war period everywhere. Here they are enormously accentuated by the tempo of events. They involve people, money, markets, houses. It is not easy for those who are still intoxicated by miracles to grasp the nettle of economic fact. There is a crisis caused by sudden growth, a dyspepsia of ingathering. By the end of the year the population of Israel will be close on a million. Appetite for numbers is stimulated by hard political reasoning as much as by emotion.

Only numbers can fill the vacuum of the Negev and of Galilee, and make Israel secure against the fa of Philistia and Carthage. T

Jewish memory of David Ben Gurion goes back as far as that. Numbers pose their own problems of housing and resettlement. Sixty thousands newcomers are crammed into the camps left by the British, who paradoxically left a legacy of temporary shelter for the thousands whom they had for so long sought to shut out of the land.

Jews who once called themselves Afghans, Turks, Bulgarians, Rumanians, Germans, Yugoslavs, Poles, Moroccans are living in tents and barracks. They move through the bottleneck of housing into the nation. They grumble, understandably enough, because many of them have now endured camp life for more than ten years, and to come home to a tent in one's own land is dispiriting and demoralising. In addition they meet with some lack of understanding by the older inhabitants, themselves refugees of an earlier decade, who cast doubts on the willingness of the newcomers to aid themselves. But this is the manner of all immigrant countries where each succeeding wave of newcomers meets with the temporary hostility of its predecessors.

The impact of immigration has disturbed the country to its depths. It has imposed an austerity regime, which, if still mild by British standards, will become intensified as the nation grows. It has compelled organised labour to abandon its long-cherished maxim of a day's pay for a day's work and to accept the necessity of piecework rates as an incentive to productivity, for without greater output at lower cost Israel will be unable to export the wide variety of consumers' goods its factories now produce. Economic aid from outside will not go on forever, and the financial largesse of American Jewry which for so long upheld Palestine's Yishuv is no solid foundation for Israel. Many American businessmen who had hoped to combine sentiment with financial profit have sadly departed from these shores.

We have still to learn many things, and to forget many. In this crucible of nation-making our maturity and sophistication seem to dissolve, and we sometimes behave like rude and noisy children. I think that we have to learn that the State is not an end in itself, but a road towards a good society. We have inherited a terrifying apparatus of administrative law from the Mandate, and our officials sometimes think and act like colonial policemen.

Much that is intolerable is excused by the lazy argument of continuing emergency. We still have no Bill of Rights, and our Parliament learns the workings of democracy with infinite slowness. These things must come, and come soon if they are to come at all. The influx of Jews from the Moslem world is weighing the balance against the West. If we do not raise them to our level, we shall decline to theirs.

It would be an unforgivable self-made tragedy if our persistent survival through two thousand years of hell should terminate in a Levantine republic. I observe with sadness the disappearance of the Jewish capacity to doubt, to laugh at oneself, to alternate between pessimism and messianism. If in scraping off the tarnish of exile, we should erase, too, those qualities and values which made us rich contributors to the culture of others, we shall indeed have lost part of ourselves, and the whole world will be poorer for the change we have wrought in ourselves. Our survival is no longer in doubt. The next few years will determine how much more this renascent nation can give humanity.

A change is often as good as a rest, and this applies particularly in the field of recreation. Office workers and men who sit or stand all day at machines may be tired without actually expending much physical energy. For these people moderate after-hours exercise in the form of games or hobbies is often more useful and health-giving than a mere rest.

Holidayers who are non-swimmers should avoid deep water and should keep out of canoes. Nobody should go into water immediately after eating.

● MOUNT SINAI Sanatorium: Abe Bronfman, president, pointed out: "We know from experience that when out-patients leave the Sanatorium they wish to adjust themselves in the community without constant reminders of past illnesses. They especially feel that neighbours, if they knew, might not associate with them. The public needs to be enlightened by the knowledge that a patient who has been discharged from a sanatorium is no longer a danger to the community". The report noted that discharges from the Sanatorium were at the highest level in its history, while the mortality rate is lower than ever before. Special tribute was paid to the Ladies Auxiliary which, in addition to its usual contribution of linens and similar essentials, donated a tomogrom attachment for the X-Ray apparatus, which would serve to aid greatly in diagnoses. The new slate of members of the board of directors of the Sanatorium, which is a constitutent agency of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, is: Abe Bronfman, Harry Bronfman, Dr. L. S. Eidinger, C. B. Fainer, Hyman Grover, Michael Hirsch, J. Kraminer, David Kruger, Bernard Lande, J. Namerow, Irving Riddell, Mrs. H. M. Ripstein, Moe Salomon, Marcus M. Sperber, K.C.; H. Wolfe.

Miss Caiserman is the daughter of H. M. Caiserman, general secretary of the Canadian Jewish Congress, and Mrs. Caiserman, and was born in Montreal. Her husband, Alfred Pinsky, is also an artist. They will go to Europe to explore art in Italy and France, Renaissance art, and the Picasso museum at Antibes, France, travelling on the S. S. Miss Caiserman's first job was in a munitions factory, during the war, checking shells for defects. Now she teaches art for the Fairmount School Home and School Association and before that taught at the Hellite Canadian Legion, and for the Y. W. and Y. M. C. A. there. Miss Caiserman is interested in swimming, horseback riding and tennis and her hobby is playing the recorder. ISRAELI APOLOGY cutor that Israel had reasons for not pursuing the inquiry to the fullest extent, and insisted that everyone, including the Prime Minister, had evinced the keenest concern for the apprehension of the murderers.

"Organizational deficiencies and inexperience existing at the time explain but do not justify the shortcomings and omissions to which reference has been made," the report continues.

"Essentially it was these in the first critical forty-eight hours, when a majority of those responsible for national security were preoccupied with the destruction of the terrorist groups, in the tacit assumption that the success of this operation would itself uncover the criminals, led to the serious misunderstandings concerning the respective duties of the several bodies charged with differing functions in the matter.

"The activities of the Army and these particular organizational difficulties were not previously brought to the notice of the Swedish Government, and the Government of Israel believes that re-examination of the matter will now show it in a new light."

The report declares that since the investigation, one police officer connected with the case has been dismissed and the police force itself has been completely reconstructed.

"The Government has reached the conclusion that there is no further action which it would be justified in taking today against the persons directly concerned at that time," the report declares.

It is understood, although not officially confirmed, that Israel has paid $38,000 to the United Nations to help defray the expenses incurred by that organization as a result of Count Bernadotte's death.

JEWS OF EUROPE

countered more frequently than before the war.

In many of the Western European nations, the committee said, the trend toward assimilation and mixed marriages has become a serious problem, and the strengthening of Jewish community groups and organizations is essential to overcome these difficulties and to give Jews deeper roots in the lands of Western Europe.

On the credit side of the ledger, the committee found that with outside help received in the past five years the basic elements of Jewish life had been restored. Jewish synagogues, schools, hospitals, children's homes and other organizations are functioning.

In Germany, the Committee said, two factors, anti-Semitism and the restitution problem, will play an important role in the final status of the Jewish community in that country. If any substantial part of Jewish losses in Germany can be recovered for the use of the community, according to the Committee, it will have a strong base for financial Jewish activities. In Austria, too, the ultimate viability of the the Jewish community will depend a great deal on the amount recovered through restitution.

The problem of adjustment in Eastern Europe is complicated by the desire of the majority of Jews to emigrate and the attempts of the Soviet satellite states to force Jewish populations into the force of the new "people's democracies," with great resultant hardship for the Jews.

In Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, where the Jewish populations are small, the conflict has been resolved in a measure through emigration. In Poland, Hungary and Rumania, however, the situation is still in a state of flux, with restrictions on emigration. In these latter countries, economic and racial problems are also sharply impeding adjustment.

In North Africa and the Moslem lands, the Committee found, some excellent beginnings have been made in the fields of relief, health, education and welfare. In this geographical area it is imperative to develop a program to give the Jew improved political and civil status keeping pace with advances in other fields. The rise to power of the Wafdists in Egypt, the committee said, has materially improved the position of Egyptian Jewry during the last few months.

WAS ONE

An observer and critic of government and American business, Mr. Fels proposed what was almost a blueprint of the New Deal's N.R.A., in his book, "The Changing World," published in 1933. He pointed out that capitalism's twin weaknesses were money and banking, and advocated government control to assure that all levels of society are benefited.

"This Changing World," held that government supervision of working hours, wages and profits in private employment was necessary. Later, in an article published in the Sunday Magazine Section of The New York Times, Mr. Fels suggested a Federal trade system as a solution for the country's difficulties.

"After all is said, business is not a privilege," he wrote. "Ours is not a right but a franchise." Fels & Company had been paying annual bonuses to its employees every year since 1901. While financial operations of Fels & Company were a well guarded secret, it was learned that the lowest 1936 bonus paid amounted to 22½ per cent of the worker's yearly wages, on the one occasion when such information was made public.

In 1934, Mr. Fels was one of the first of the industrialists to inaugurate a five-day work week without a reduction in pay, for which he received a special commendation from the N.R.A. Administrator, the late Hugh S. Johnson. In 1937, he received the gold medal of the American Congress of Radiology for his contribution to the discovery of evidence on the operation and effects of the thymus gland.

At various times, Mr. Fels had served as a director and president of the Philadelphia Orchestra Association, a vice-president of the Philadelphia Playgrounds and Recreation Association, a trustee of the Franklin Institute and the Wistar Institute of Anatomy, a director of the City Club, a member of the Executive Committee of the Bureau of Municipal Research and a member of a commission named by former Gov. George H. Earle in 1937 to draft a new city charter.

Mr. Fels made many of his philanthropic gifts anonymously. Shy and modest, he preferred not to talk about his charitable undertakings or the humanitarianism which was his outstanding characteristic.

In donating the planetarium to Franklin Institute, Mr. Fels specified that his name was not to be mentioned. The recipients kept that promise, but without the donor's knowledge had his name inscribed in the marble above the entrance. A spry little man with a goatee, Mr. Fels retained his optimistic view of the state of the world and mankind in general to the last, says the New York Herald Tribune. On his ninetieth birthday, he said, "Whatever may appear to the contrary, humanity is on the road to better things. I have never known a time when there wasn't trouble."

Mr. Fels was born in Yanceyville, N. C., in 1860, the son of Lazarus and Susannah Fels. He left school at 16 because of poor health and joined his father and two older brothers, Joseph and Maurice, in the soap-manufacturing business. At 21, he became a partner in Fels & Co. and in 1914 he was made president when Joseph died.

Mr. Fels introduced naphtha to soap-making, an innovation that was to make the company outstanding in its field and one of the largest in the country. As the family-owned company grew, Mr. Fels began an organized course of philanthropy, contributing to peace groups, Jewish charities, medical and scientific research.
